Welcome

Welcome to Georgia Southern College. After weeks of planning and preparation you have finally arrived in college. The now unfamiliar rules, regulations, procedures, faces and faculty will soon become part of the patterns here on campus as you make the transition into college life. You will soon become accustomed to the college traditions of gulping coffee before that 7:30 class, the routine of standing in line, and the art of peaceful co-existence with your roommate. At times you may even wonder what made you decide to come here in the first place. But these are all a part of the adjustment to college that every freshman makes.

But you are here and will soon become a part of the exciting experiences of campus life. You will be a part of the college during the next years, and the college will be a part of you.

Editorials

Welcome Frosh

This past week over 1,200 persons took the first step toward a college education, by means of form filling, ticket punching, fee paying, picture taking, letter writing, book buying and countless other details that comprise Freshmen Orientation Week. With the arrival of the Freshmen Class, the college begins its 61st year.

Ten years ago, when the name of the college was changed from Georgia Teachers College to Georgia Southern, the entire enrollment was smaller than today's incoming Freshmen Class. Only 1,185 students attended the college in 1959. The college is now experiencing an unprecedented period of growth—in plant facilities, faculty, student enrollment, and prestige. Freshmen, by their choice of college, are now a part of this rapidly expanding institution.

By nature, freshmen are bewildered creatures. They should be. They have spent a hectic week whirling through lectures, speeches, library orientation, dorm sessions, advisement, general meetings, and registration. These activities are designed to assist and guide freshmen; yet, by the lost look on so many new faces, one would hardly think these proceedings are achieving their goal. The new students must slowly sort out and digest all that has transpired during the past week. In time, some of these activities may even make sense.

The GEORGE-ANNE joins others in welcoming the Freshmen Class. This class can give much to the campus. Freshmen can add to many events simply by showing interest. Freshmen are excited by the idea of college and their enthusiasm can spread to other students and faculty. Welcome.

Changing Maps

On Page 4 of this week's Special Freshmen Edition of the GEORGE-ANNE is a map of the college. As any student who has been around the campus for any length of time will tell you—this is no ordinary map. This is a comprehensive map which details the future development of the college—how the college will look in future years. Progress is constantly being made in the college's expansion program. Just this past year, three buildings were completed, the Biology Building, the Hanner Gym Annex, and the Plant Operations Building, and four additional buildings are presently under construction.

Freshmen, take a good long look at this map. Then take a look around you at the campus today, four years from now you probably will not recognize it.

Freshmen Begin Ritualistic Rites

Strange rites and customs still exist today with many tribes and clans throughout the world. Most of these rituals precede the phenomenon of a boys entry into the ambiguous realm of manhood. Members of one tribe show their manhood by winning a fierce battle or war; members of another prove themselves showing their ability to survive, alone and defenseless, for several weeks in an alien environment such as a hostile jungle; and members of still another tribe must pass many devious tests and schemes which have been meticulously devised by the elders of the tribe. All of these ordeals just to prove ones manhood.

In this country however, we are fortunate enough, and civilized enough not to have to resort to these primitive customs to prove a person has reached maturity. In the United States today, when a person is old enough, he is packed up (accompanied by the bemoaning fanfare of emotional parents) and shipped off to college. Supposedly once in college our friend magically reaches maturity and "becomes a man." This, is the civilized method for proving ones manhood—or is it?

Freshmen on campus after a week of college life can sit back now and scrutinize more closely the ritualistic maze of events that comprises a college. The fantastic array of college rites that totally engulf freshmen, both physically and mentally, is simply a contemporary version of these ancient tribal customs.

The first and one of the most savage of these ordeals is the attempt of a freshman to win a fierce battle—the war of the computer cards—registration! Victory can come quickly for those who arrive early in the day; or it can exist just beyond the reach of some who fade into oblivion amid a flourish of "Drop-Add" cards.

Next the freshmen must survive for many weeks in an alien environment, his dorm. The freshmen learns the physical characteristics of his building, when the telephones are least busy, and the quickest route from the Williams Center to Herty Building when he is late to class. Soon the freshman will become more familiar with the myriad of strange rules and regulations which, after the period of several quarters he will find them just as strange and even more confusing.

Finally, the freshman will encounter many devious tests and schemes planned for him by the tribal elders. The custom today is given a label of a more legitimate nature and called "Final Exams." Our professorial elders plan and carry out this function which becomes the final and absolute judgement of (A.) the individuals manhood, (B.) his ability to fast-talk his professor, or (C.) his remarkable luck with multiple choice tests.

Freshmen during the next four years can look forward to these and many other strange college customs. The freshman should, however, take heart. Things could be worse. After all, these are the civilized methods.

SAGC—A Means To An End

Freshmen, you are young and alive, and because of this one point we, the Student Association of Governing Councils, welcome you to the Georgia Southern Campus. The challenge is for you to become aware of the many and varied facets revolving around student life. This nation, this state, and fortunately, this campus are at a point in time where social change is of great concern. Students are no longer accepting the proverbial statement that the young are "tomorrow's leaders," but are now acting in a capacity which labels us as leaders of today.

The SAGC is prepared to do great things in the realm of student welfare. We are here as students ourselves to find solutions to those problems which you feel are significant. We also have begun searching out red warning flags which are shyly waiting in the shadows ready to impede our progress. Questions are arising as to whether this government as a complete entity should make a stand on Viet Nam, Black equality, or even women's rights and responsibilities. You must guide us in defining our position. The Student Association of Governing Councils is looking to you to provide many answers just as you are looking to us. The point to be made is that we are not separate entities. You are Student Government.

Demonstrations are not high on the SAGC priority list. Items such as Student-Teacher Course Evaluation, in loco parentis, search and seizure, and concepts of Constitutionality are facing this government. How would you like to answer these questions; Is the administration of Georgia Southern College more concerned with the welfare of the student or the economic well being of the institution? Is it important for you to have to live in a dorm and to have to eat in the campus dining halls? and Do women need to pass a test on rules and regulations before they are allowed to date??? These are questions that are quite real. These are questions the SAGC must consider.

Georgia Southern College is now a major part of your life and your future. You must not remain silent. Now is the time for all good students to voice their opinions. We expect to hear from you soon.

Intramural Managers Meet

A meeting is to be held Tuesday, September 30th, for all managers or coaches of flag football teams to be entered in the men's Intramural program fall quarter.

In calling the meeting, Tom Martin, head of the Intramural Department, urged that a representative from each potential team should be present to discuss new rules and regulations which will be enacted this year.

The meeting will be held in room 153 of the Hanner Annex at 7 p.m.

Dr. Lindsey Publishes Manual

Dr. John R. Lindsey, Associate Professor of Education, has had a manual published entitled "The Teaching Profession-Foundations of Education." Lindsey's manual, described as "an orientation to teaching," will be used in courses for beginning students of education.

Lindsey was graduated from Clemson College with B.S.A. degree and received the M.Ed. degree from Mercer University, the A.M.Ed. degree from Florida State University, and the Ed.D. degree from Florida State University.

Officials Association Meets

This year the men's Intramural Program is establishing an association of officials to conduct the various activities. The association will be composed of students who have a genuine interest in the various sports and who have a desire to officiate.

The purpose of this association is to upgrade the quality of the Intramural contests. All male students who are interested should attend the organizational meeting on September 30th at 8 p.m. in room 153 of the Hanner Annex.

Program Set For Pharmacists

The college will join the University System of Georgia's Continuing Education Course for Pharmacists in November, according to Dr. Hilton Bonniwell, Director of Continuing Education and Public Service here.

The School of Pharmacy and the Center for Continuing Education of the University of Georgia have cooperated in the establishment of a telephone network through the facilities of the University System of Georgia. The new program will utilize the Tele-Lecture technique to present a series of four weekly lectures to pharmacists through the state in November. This is the first continuing education program to be offered to pharmacists in Georgia using this unique method of presentation.

The lectures will originate at the University of Georgia Center for Continuing Education and will be heard simultaneously at ten additional locations in Georgia by means of an amplifier-speaker system via the telephone network.

Dr. John Eidson Extends President's Welcome

September 20, 1969

To the Students:

On behalf of the faculty and staff, I am pleased to welcome you back to the campus. To our freshmen and new students, we are pleased that you have chosen Georgia Southern, and to our returning students, we hope that you had a good summer and that the coming year will be a thoroughly successful one for you.

You will this year be a part of the largest student body that we have ever had. And with this increase in enrollment, we have our largest faculty (approximately 300-40 more than last year), and the best facilities that we have had. We are beginning the year with three new buildings: the Biology Building, the Plant Operations Building, and the new Gymnasium. Also, we have some new academic programs which your advisers will be telling you about.

We will try during the year to provide you with excellent opportunities for your education, cultural activities, and recreation. Georgia Southern has much to offer, and our faculty and staff are here to help you take advantage of these opportunities. Do not hesitate to ask your adviser, your teachers, or any of us for information and advice.

Again, welcome to Georgia Southern. We are looking forward to working with you.

Sincerely,
John O. Eidson

Dr. Duncan Stresses Exciting Atmosphere

The beginning of a new college year is always an exciting time. Much of the excitement is due to the consciousness of the numerous opportunities which will be provided to participate in important and pleasurable events. The greatest part of the excitement, however, is related to the knowledge that a great group of wonderful people—students and faculty—will be together again on a beautiful campus.

Those of us who have been at Georgia Southern College before are particularly pleased to have the opportunity of sharing these events and people with you who are new to our campus - both freshmen and transfers. We want you to feel at home here, and we believe that you will soon share our devotion to Georgia Southern College.
